

DYING GANGSTER
GASPED NAME OF ALLEGED SLAYER*Police Now Seeking Mur-derer of Tony Genna in Chicago

Chicago, July 9.—(AP)—Only the name "Cavalero," spoken by the dying Tony Genna, and three theories on the motives of his assassination guided police inquiry today into the latest upheaval in Chicago gangland. The third member of his family to fall before bullets in six weeks, Tony yielded to entreaties of relatives at his death bed and violated his gangster's code of silence to gasp the name. And with this slight clue the police began gathering suspects for questioning and possible identification. The interrogation of seven men, taken into custody last night, was based on police belief that rebellion against the Genna control of alcohol had caused the fatal shooting of Tony yesterday in the heart of Little Italy.

In the plea of Sam Genna, Tony's brother, for police protection, investigators saw grounds for belief that the entire Genna clan has been marked for death.

Brother Fears For Life

"Please," begged Sam, "don't send me home. They're after me, too. First it's Angelo. Then it's Mike, now it's Tony, and next it will be me." Angelo died May 26 in an ambush in "Little Italy." Michael, another brother, was shot to death a few weeks later in a pistol fight with policemen, two of whom were killed and a third wounded.

A police escort was given Sam and he was taken to a secret hiding place. Search was made for Pete Genna, fined several days ago for carrying a pistol. Jim, the sixth brother, is supposed to be visiting in Sicily.

In searching for information regarding the activities of the Gennas, the police found they controlled the Marsala Club, an organization of 250 members, named from Marsala, a town in Sicily. Originally designed to regulate sales of olive oil and cheese among their countrymen, the brothers, the police said, had later arrogated to themselves full power over the distilling and selling of alcohol.

After Mike Genna's death, raids in the west side habitat of the gang, resulted in finding thousands of gallons of mash and more than a score of stills.

Youth Killed on Highway This Morning

Raymond McDermott, 22, of Clinton, Ia., was instantly killed shortly after midnight on the Lincoln Highway, three miles east of Morrison, when he was struck by a car driven by Harry Howe, son of C. J. Howe of Morrison, his neck being broken.

In company with John R. Dunn, Gerald VanBuren and William Halliday, McDermott was returning to his home from 1-Delwood pavilion east of Round Grove, when Halliday's hat blew off. He and McDermott got out of their car to go back for the hat, when they were both struck by the Howe machine. Halliday escaped serious injury.

An inquest is to be held this afternoon at Morrison to determine Howe's culpability in the accident.

Louis Gieshe Is Arrested
by Deputy U. S. Marshals

Louis Gieshe, of Silvis, formerly of this city, who was indicted by the federal grand jury last spring for having forged liquor stamps in his possession, was arrested yesterday afternoon by Deputy U. S. Marshals Richard and Arthur in his Washburn south of this city at his home. United States Deputy Marshal Gallagher of Freeport was to arrive in Dixon today and take Gieshe to that city. Gieshe is also under indictment in Lee county on charges of possessing and selling intoxicating liquor, bond having been furnished until the September term.

May Complete Jury Today to Try World War Veteran

Tuscola, Ill., July 9.—(AP)—When the Douglas County circuit court, in which Opal Arthur is on trial for his life for the alleged slaying of Charles Martin of Monticello, reconvened at 1:15 after the noon recess Thursday, the completion of the jury was expected before adjournment for the day.

When recess was taken four good prospects were in the jury box, and there was a possibility they would be accepted as the third panel, thus completing the jury.

Chief of State Police Visitor in Dixon Today

John Scott of Kankakee, chief of the Illinois state motorcycle department, was in Dixon today with his family. COOLIDGE KEEPS
HANDS OFF LOCAL ELECTION MOVES*Will Take No Part in Any of Congressional Campaigns

Swampscott, Mass., July 9.—(AP)—President Coolidge does not intend to play an active role in congressional elections.

This determination holds even in his own congressional district in Massachusetts, in which a vacancy now exists as a result of the recent death of George B. Churchill.

Reports that Mr. Coolidge is behind a movement to have Henry L. Bowles of Springfield seek this seat are known to be somewhat vexing to the executive, despite his close personal friendship for Mr. Bowles. This candidate undoubtedly would be the choice of the President and his personal friends have urged Mr. Bowles to run, but Mr. Coolidge believes it is not his prerogative to participate in these elections.

Mr. Bowles conferred here yesterday with Frank W. Stearns, intimate friend of the President, and Thomas White, also close to the executive.

Standing pat on this policy, Mr. Coolidge has made it known that he will not speak at the Essex County newspaper editors' outing, to be held Saturday at Lake Attash, which Senator Butler will attend.

Switchman Killed in Auto Accident: Wife Is Injured

Centralla, Ill., July 9.—(AP)—J. E. Ragland, 40, Centralla railroad switchman, died early today in a hospital at Breeze, Illinois, from injuries received when he ran the car he was driving into the rear end of an automobile truck near Carlyle, 13 miles west of here. His wife, Minnie, 36, was severely injured and is receiving treatment in a Breeze hospital. A coroner's investigation is in progress in Carlyle this afternoon.

Free Mail Delivery

Through the efforts of Congressman William R. Johnson, Mt. Carroll will have village delivery service effective October 1, 1925. The Postoffice Department has issued an order authorizing one regular carrier and four hours auxiliary carrier assistance daily. Mt. Carroll people have been trying for some time to get this service and now they feel very grateful to Congressman Johnson for his effort in obtaining the service.

Uxoricide Is Sentenced to Life Imprisonment

Decatur, Ill., July 9.—(AP)—Leroy Baker, who on May 7 shot and killed his wife while she slept, today pleaded guilty just before lawyers were completing the defense of the case. Judge James S. Baldwin sentenced him to life imprisonment. Judge Baldwin said he would have given the death sentence except for the fact of testimony showing the mental condition of Baker.

WALKER MAY MEET SHADE
New York, July 9.—(AP)—Mike Walker of Elizabeth, N. "MONKEY TRIAL"
OPENS TOMORROW
IN DAYTON, TENN.*Little City Prepares for
"Big Show" in Coming Hearing

Dayton, Tenn., July 9.—(AP)—William Jennings Bryan believes that John T. Scopes, defendant in the Tennessee evolution trial, "is doing more harm to the teachers of the country than to any other class." This harm, he declared today, would be "infinitely increased if his (Scopes) views as to the independence of the teacher were established."

"If the evolutionists can succeed in establishing the doctrine that a teacher can teach anything that he or she pleases," Mr. Bryan said, "and teachers disregard the wishes of their employers, it will become necessary to find out before appointment what the teacher thinks on disputed questions. Under the 'present system,' personal views of the teachers are left free, and the control of what is to be taught is left to those who employ the teachers—that is," Mr. Bryan asserted, "to the taxpayers, and parents, acting through legislatures and boards of education."

Dayton, Tenn., July 9.—(AP)—Dayton today settled down to the completion of final preparations for what has been termed the battle between fundamentalism and evolution.

Attorneys, witnesses, newspapermen and plain visitors arriving on every incoming train and bus, were greeted by the monotonous clanging of hammers as carpenters applied the finishing touches to the concession stands springing up in every alleyway and lining the sidewalks.

An address by William Jennings Bryan at Morgan Springs last night formed the chief topic of conversation as Daytonians assembled on street corners and in stores.

An expression of his faith in the modern jury system and a discussion of what he termed an attempt by a minority of scientists to force their views on scientific lines upon the children of the majority formed the principal themes of Mr. Bryan in his address.

Attorneys Arrive Today
Mr. Bryan concluded "with the declaration that the Tennessee evolution law simply prohibits the evolutionists from using the public schools for the purpose of substituting their idea of religion for the religion of the masses."

The array of defense counsel was to arrive during the day. Clarence Darrow coming from Cincinnati late this afternoon and Dudley Field Malone and Arthur Garfield Hays coming from Chattanooga. With them were expected to come several witnesses for the defense.

Attorney General A. Thomas Stewart of the eighteenth judicial circuit, arrived yesterday as did Judge John T. Raulston.

Shortly afterward, Thomas Scopes, father of the defendant, came from his home in Paducah, Ky., to be present at the trial of his son.

Mr. Scopes had little to say. He visited various places of local interest, meeting Mr. Bryan on the street, where the two chatted briefly.

Rock Islander Killed by Bolt in Wisconsin

Superior, Wis., July 9.—(AP)—Leon F. Robinson, Rock Island, Ill., was instantly killed yesterday afternoon at 3 o'clock when struck by a bolt of lightning during a rainless electrical storm at Webster. Robinson and Fred Brunsvig, also of Rock Island, were fishing from a boat on Devils Lake about two miles from Webster when the accident occurred.

When Robinson's body was recovered it was found that all of the hair had been burned from his head and that his body was scarred from its full length. Robinson's companion was knocked unconscious by the bolt, and the boat overturned. In some manner his clothing became caught on an oak lock which saved him from drowning. Recovering consciousness he made his way to shore, and reached home at five p. m., in a dazed condition. The search for Robinson's body and its recovery followed.

Former Sheriff of DeKalb County Dies at Sycamore

Sycamore, Ill., July 9.—(AP)—Hiram Ostrander, 93, for 68 years a resident of DeKalb County and for many years its sheriff, died today. He had been injured in a fall a month ago.

In order to enlist in the Civil War with his home company, Ostrander made the trip from California where he was visiting, to Sycamore, on horseback. He served throughout the war and at its close returned to Sycamore.

Ostrander was a member of the 18th Illinois Cavalry in the Civil war and was county sheriff, DeKalb, from 1890 to 1904. His horseback trip from California took five months and five days.

When injured five weeks ago he expressed the wish that he might live to receive his July pension check. The check came yesterday and he died today, his 93rd birthday.

IOWA MAN HURT IN MISHAP ON
ASHTON STREET*Fractured Knee Resulted When Auto
Hit Big Tree

(Telegraph Special Service.)
Ashton, July 9.—Joseph Hegel of St. Ansgar, Iowa, is in the Lincoln hospital at Rochelle suffering a severe fracture of the right knee and other lesser injuries, the result of an unusual automobile accident on the Lincoln Highway here yesterday afternoon about 2:30. Mr. Hegel was a passenger in the front seat of a Dorr touring car owned and driven by John Klug, also of St. Ansgar, and the former's two sons were seated in the rear of the car. They were on their way to Chicago.

Turning the corner at the filling stations, the car proceeded north about a block to directly in front of the home of S. T. Jennings, when it climbed the curb and crashed head on into a huge maple tree. Klug was lighting a cigarette after the car had made the turn and started up the hill and Hegel was assisting in steering the machine. In some unexplainable manner the car became uncontrollable, with the above result. The front end of the car was badly damaged, one spring being driven deep into the trunk of the tree. Hegel was the only occupant to suffer any serious injury and after being given first aid treatment, he was taken to the Lincoln hospital at Rochelle.

The efforts of several men working with a wrecking car were necessary to extricate the machine, parts of which had been driven into the tree to a considerable depth. The two boys in the rear seat, aside from receiving a severe shaking up, were uninjured. The car was towed to a local garage.

Defense Motions Halt Evidence Against Looney

Rock Island, Ill., July 9.—(AP)—The trial of John P. Looney was halted today when defense attorneys argued a motion from the defense, which if sustained by the court, would force the state to turn over to Looney any papers, exhibits, or other articles that may have been taken from the Looney home.

According to the defense, the Looney home was raided illegally after Rock Island's vice troubles of three years ago and a large quantity of papers, receipts, files and other personal property seized.

The state denies that this material is now in its hands. Little prospect that further evidence would be turned over today, since the defense has another motion which will be argued as soon as Lawrence Pedigo, star witness for the state, completes his direct testimony. The defense has announced it will seek a continuance in order to give it time to summon witnesses and prepare to cross examine Pedigo.

Repeated attempts to shake the testimony of Pedigo met with little success this morning as Looney, cross examining in his own behalf, put the witness through an exhaustive interrogation.

Pedigo, who had been rather indifferent and casual in his answers to direct examination, sat forward in his chair and became noticeably aggressive as soon as Looney, his former employer, took over the questioning. Looney was able to bring out several lapses in the witness' memory and emphasized Pedigo's inability to name exact dates in many instances, but the witness fought back frequently when Looney became insistent.

Boy Badly Bitten by Dog South of Ashton

Paul Smith, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Smith, who are spending the summer at White Rock, suffered painful injuries when attacked by a large dog south of Ashton yesterday afternoon. He was at the Ashton cemetery with his father and crossed the road to enter a farm yard for the purpose of securing a drink of water. As he entered the yard, the dog leaped from a clump of bushes, and the boy threw up his left arm to prevent the animal striking him in the face. The dog sank its teeth deep into the left shoulder. The boy was hurried to Ashton where he was given first aid by a physician and then brought to Dixon where the wound was dressed.

Monmouth Man's Sense of Hearing Restored

Monmouth, Ill., July 9.—(AP)—His sense of hearing restored by an airplane flight, L. J. Sierer, was able today to understand conversation over the telephone for the first time in years. Mr. Sierer, who is more than sixty years of age, was carried to an altitude of 8300 feet at the Monmouth air field where the plane was rushed downward at tremendous speed. Within a few minutes after his return to earth the old man's eyes sparkled and he said he could hear again.

Arrested for Theft of Tire from Wrecked Auto

Fred Dunn and John Erhardt of Sioux City, Iowa, were taken into custody this morning on an information charging petty larceny. They were alleged to have taken a new tire from a wrecked car on the Lincoln Highway west of Dixon the night of June 27. Judge William L. Leech fined them $100 and costs, suspending the fine and placing them on parole for a period of six months.

DAWES SAYS U. S.
MUST ACCEPT ITS
RICH OBLIGATIONS*Must Distribute Surplus
Credits Discriminately
Through World

Duluth, Minn., July 9.—(AP)—Rufus C. Dawes told the Minnesota Bankers Association in convention here today that it is the duty of the United States "to accept the obligation of its wealth, to distribute throughout the world the surplus credits at its disposal, and to do it with discriminating judgment in order that the investing public may not suffer."

Mr. Dawes, who was chief of staff of the American section of the Reparation Commission's Expert committee that drew up what is known as the "Dawes Plan," suggested this program also in order that funds so released may be devoted to such purposes as would restore the productive capacity of the world and the purchasing power of consumers.

"In performing this duty we shall be serving our own interests as well as serving the world," Mr. Dawes declared. He is a brother of Vice President Dawes. "The part we are to play in the reconstruction of the business of the world, the disbursement of the credit for the rest of the world. Other nations have held this position before us, and without exception they have met the obligation of their position by the wise and free distribution of the credit at their disposal. We have profited by their action."

625 Millions Annually.
Mr. Dawes said that "we might advance annually 625 million dollars, which is about what might, under the most favorable circumstances, be paid to us under the full settlement of international indebtedness."

"We might invest this sum in foreign securities every year for 20 years before we shall attain the position held by England before the war," he stated. "The department of commerce estimates that at present, private investors in the United States own about four billion dollars of foreign bonds, stocks and real property and the government itself owns about 12 billion of inter-governmental obligations. On the other hand, the holdings of foreign investors in America are estimates at four billion dollars."

"This indicates the rapid extinguishment of our foreign debt and the growth of our investments abroad. The movement is a large one of the greatest advantage to all concerned. But the balance held by us now are less than those possessed by England before the war, which were estimated at 20 billion of pre-war dollars, the equivalent possibly, all things considered, of 200 billion dollars today. Who will say that was a precarious position? This danger of the invasion of our markets may be exaggerated but due precautions ought to be taken against all threatened dangers."

Need Consistent Tariff.
A consistent American tariff policy must be adopted and in addition there should be some concerted policy of American manufacturers looking to the reduction of costs of production and the opening of foreign markets, and especially of American bankers in handling the huge volume of credits that has come under our control, Mr. Dawes said.

"If the payment of debt necessitates the shipment of goods from the debtor nation, then it follows that the loan money by the creditor nation requires the shipment of goods from the creditor to the debtor nation, and sets up at the moment of greatest strain, a counter-current against the threatened flooding of our markets," he continued.

"The time of ultimate payment may be extended indefinitely or until the payment may be made without injury to either debtor or creditor. No matter how sound the theory of 'exportable surplus' may be, it is certainly not true that deliveries of goods must be set in the moment payment begins. 'Among bankers, perhaps, the fear is greater that it will be insecure for the debtor nations to secure the dollar exchange necessary to make the payments, and among the manufacturers, the fear is that it may be made possible by the invasion of our markets with a flood of goods.'"

"But there appears to be no plan, generally accepted, to secure for the benefit of the taxpayer the maximum amounts obtainable and yet to protect not only the solvency of debtors, but the markets of creditors by some check upon excessive payments. The general outline of such a plan as applied to Germany was embodied in the report of the expert committee. And it was this, as much as anything, that brought all nations to agreement in the plan. That some such adjustment of inter-allied debts seems certain. The interests of creditors are served by preserving the paying power of debtors."

"The interests of industry are served, too, by preserving the buying power of the purchaser of goods. Some adjustment for the settlement of inter-allied debts similar to the one proposed by the expert committee, will be made."

U. S. DIST. JUDGE,
UNDER INDICTMENT,
KILLED IN MISHAP*Auto Plunged Into a Creek Day After His Indictment

Jackson, Tenn., July 9.—Judge G. W. Ross, of the federal court of Western Tennessee, was killed early today when an automobile in which he was riding ran off a bridge about five miles east of Jackson and turned over in a creek, plunging him underneath. His body was discovered shortly after the accident and was brought to Jackson.

Judge Ross had started for the farm conducted by J. H. Kirkpatrick, whose name he was charged with having forged in an indictment returned yesterday, in connection with the failure of a Jackson bank. He was under bonds of $25,000. The bank was closed about a month ago, after an investigation by the state bank examiner showed a deficiency of funds in excess of $300,000. Thomas B. Carroll, former cashier; John M. Carroll, his son and assistant cashier; and W. L. Cawthon, a timber dealer, were arrested on warrants soon after the failure. They were indicted with Judge Ross and were released in bond yesterday.

Judge Ross was 47 years old.

Drowned in Creek.
Dr. W. G. Saunders, who examined the body, expressed the belief that Judge Ross met his death by drowning and not from a wound on the head caused from his impact with the windshield of the car.

At the spot where the automobile left the roadbed, it defined a 45 degree angle. The road had been charged slightly within the last few months, but Judge Ross had traversed it several times since.

The automobile was partly submerged in a stream, swollen by recent heavy rains.

The basis of Judge Ross' indictment was in unpaid drafts, bearing his name, several of them issued on Memphis lawyers, and found in the resources of the bank. When called upon by the bank liquidating agent to pay the drafts, Judge Ross had refused, declaring that he was not indebted to the institution.

Soon after the bank failure, Judge Ross issued a statement in which he said payment of the drafts had been made contingent on the operation of loans in Memphis banks, and as he had failed to benefit from a single one of them, he did not feel himself liable for payment.

When the indictments were returned yesterday, implicating him with three others associated with the bank, Judge Ross said:

"It should be taken into consideration that a grand jury inquiry is wholly an ex parte proceeding."

Start Bankruptcy Action Against Mail Order House

Chicago, July 9.—(AP)—Operating losses of $2,000,000 during the last two years were revealed today in bankruptcy proceedings instituted against the mail order house of Phillipsborn, Inc.

Chicago, July 9.—(AP)—Bankruptcy proceedings against the mail order house of Phillipsborn, Inc., with liabilities of more than $1,000,000 and assets of $750,000 were begun today in federal court.

Receivership was asked by three creditors whose claims aggregate less than $50,000.

Attorneys for the firm asserted the company is solvent.

Phillipsborn has been reorganized during the last five years after a long period of successful business in general mail order merchandise.

The petitioners' allegation that the firm had been for some time operating at a loss was denied.

Harvest Hands Stole a Santa Fe Freight Train

Lamar, Colo., July 9.—(AP)—Sixteen harvest field workers out of forty or more who yesterday seized a Santa Fe freight train near Syracuse, Kan., overpowered the crew and ran it to Lamar, only to be met and routed by an armed posse, waited in the county jail here today to learn what the cost of their adventure would be.

The harvest workers attacked the train east of Syracuse, brandishing guns and clubs as they boarded it. The conductor, however, dropped a note as the train rolled slowly through that town with the result that word was sent here and a posse was formed by sheriffs.

The harvesters showed fight on sighting the posse, but fled when scores of shots were fired over their heads. Sixteen of the fleeing men were caught in the roundup.

ORGANIZERS OF
'CONSTABULARY'
GIVEN HEARING*Justice Shaulis Took Case of Two Under Advisement

BULLETIN.
Robert Dillon and Harry Delaney, organizers for the "Illinois Constabulary" were held to the September grand jury by Justice J. O. Shaulis this afternoon on a charge of operating a confidence game, the bonds being placed at $5,000 each. Counsel for the organizers satisfied the court that the bonds would be arranged this afternoon.

It was rumored that officers from other cities were in the court room or very near, awaiting an opportunity to serve warrants which they held for one or both of the men.

Robert Dillon and Harry Delaney, organizers of the Illinois Constabulary returned to Dixon this morning and appeared before Justice J. O. Shaulis for a hearing on a charge of operating a confidence game. The original charge of impersonating an officer was amended to that of operating a confidence game. Two witnesses testified and the case was rested with the justice who took it under advisement until 2 o'clock this afternoon.

Attorneys Sherwood Dixon and Gerald Jones appeared for the defendants. State's Attorney Mark C. Keller conducting the prosecution. Chief John Stack of Kankakee, head of the state motorcycle police, was also present at the hearing. Other parties from different parts of the state, said to be interested in the activities of the organizers, were also in the city today and were awaiting the decision of the justice which would decide whether the organizers are to be held to the grand jury or the case dismissed. At noon today, Justice Shaulis stated that the evidence submitted at the hearing this morning was equally divided.

REOPEN PROBE OF ACTIONS OF
JUDGE ENGLISH*Congressional Committee to Meet Friday at Centralla

St. Louis, Mo., July 9.—(AP)—Six members of the special congressional committee inquiring into the official conduct of Federal Judge George W. English of the Eastern Illinois District, met in the Federal Building here today and adjourned to meet tomorrow in Centralla, Illinois.

Resumption of the inquiry was understood to relate to private transactions between Judge English and the Merchants State Bank of Centralla, Illinois, in which the jurist was a director and stockholder.

Last March, the jurist denied he was paid a salary by the bank other than $5 a day as a director on days when the board met.

Judge English admitted borrowing money from the bank to buy his home in East St. Louis, Ill., but said he did business with the institution as he did with anyone else.

"There is nothing to hide in the transaction, as everything was open and above board," he was quoted.

The bank was one of five designated by Judge English as depositories for government funds in bankruptcy cases in the district.

The congressional committee included Chairman Boies of Iowa; Messrs. of Maine, Christopherson of North Dakota; Sumner of Texas; Michener of Michigan and Tillman of Arkansas. A. B. Dennis of Danville, Ill., appeared in the role of prosecutor and William M. Acton, Danville, was the chief defense counsel.

Regular Army Officer
Missing Ninety Days

Washington, July 9.—(AP)—Investigation by war department officials and the police of Lancaster, Pa., has failed to life the mystery of the disappearance three months ago of Captain Robert M. Connell, of the regular army.

Captain Connell, formerly national guard instructor at Lancaster, was ordered transferred to Fort Hancock, N. J., but has not arrived there. In view of his excellent record, Judge Advocate Gen. Hull has recommended that the law requiring dropping of officers who are absent without leave or explanation for ninety days be disregarded in this case for a time at least. Nothing has been found in the captain's personal affairs that would give the investigators a clue, and there is no mention in his service record of any living relatives.

(Telegraph Special Service.)
LaSalle, July 9.—Pictures of Leonard Borne and Peter Delplan, missing Peru youths, who are suspected of the murder of Mary Sejak of LaSalle, whose body was found on a road south of this city Monday morning, are being sent to police and sheriffs throughout the country.

Thus far the search for the young fellows, with whom Mary and her companion were riding Sunday night, has proven unavailing.

Sheriff Welter, assisted by police from Peru and LaSalle, went to Aurora, where a brother of Borne was arrested a short time ago and searched the house. No trace of the slayers was found but a watch was established and being kept close to the place so that if they do show up they will be caught.

The police have established a watch over the mail

Gounod's Opera—Faust

Sunday, July 12th
In bringing the famous opera, Faust, Gounod's masterpiece, before the people to be sung in English, I have several reasons in mind. It gives my students opportunities to study the great works, experience of singing and acting before the public. The people who are not always able to visit the city to hear grand opera are treated to a musical feast such as they seldom get for the small admission which is charged to meet expenses only. I am personally, through my association of many years with the great singers, deeply devoted to opera and the work I am accomplishing with my students is done a good deal for the mere love of it and the desire to educate and stimulate love for the greatest in music. I am entirely aware of the fact that the members of my little company, though very capable, are still students, but possess the making of great artists some day and what they are now producing is the stepping stone to wards greater things. It is my earnest wish that music and opera lovers encourage these wonderful young people in their efforts and hard work which they have been doing on this opera for months by coming Sunday, July 12th, at 2.30, and filling the cool, lovely Dixon Theatre to the last seat.

No music is so appealing as Gounod's Faust and no soprano and tenor duet as great, and the church scene between Marguerite and Mephisto all worth traveling miles to hear. I had the good fortune as a student to be a guest in the home of the great master Gounod when this opera was in Manuscript and heard him give his own interpretation on the piano. Among all operas no work has retained so firm a hold upon the people's affection as Gounod's Faust.

You will be repaid for your efforts in coming, July 12th.

Clinton Awarded 1926

Highway Golf Tournament
(Additional Sports, Page 6)
G. E. Lamb of Clinton, Ia., was last evening elected president of the Lincoln Highway Golf Assn. at a meeting of the six clubs represented held after the first day of this year's tourney at the Rock River Country Club at Sterling. H. E. Oppold of Sterling was chosen vice president and C. A. Armstrong of Clinton, in which city it was voted to hold the 1926 tournament, was chosen secretary-treasurer.

The scores at the end of the first 36 holes of the match last night: Polo, 1902 down; Sterling, 108 down; Morrison, 115 down; DeKalb, 124 down; Dixon, 127 down; Clinton, 146 down.

Individual scores of the Dixon team at the end of play Wednesday: Shuck, 6 down; Raymond, 9 down; Stokes, 14 down; Rogers, 16 down; Roe, 18 down; Dysart, 18 down; Der Kinderen, 23 down; Leger, 23 down.

At noon today at the completion of 54 holes the score was: Sterling, 150 down; Polo, 165 down; DeKalb, 181 down; Dixon and Morrison, 186 down; Clinton 203 down.

Lowest individual scores at noon: Oakland, DeKalb, 2 down; Markle, Polo, 3 down; Oppold, Sterling, 4 down; Bracken, Polo, 5 down.

In 1921, the yield of gold from British South Africa was nearly $170,000,000.

"A commonplace life," we say, and we sigh:
But why should we sigh as we say?
The commonplace sun in the commonplace sky,
Makes up the commonplace day;
The moon and the stars are commonplace things,
And the flower that blooms, and the bird that sings;
But dark were the world and sad our lot
If the flowers faded and the sun shone not;
And God, who studies each separate soul,
Out of commonplace lives makes His beautiful whole.
—Susan Coolidge.

ENTERTAINED AT PARK FOR ARIZONA GUESTS.
Mrs. John Halpin entertained with a picnic supper at Lowell Park Wednesday evening in honor of Mrs. Hiram Gelsey and daughter Helen, of Miami, Ariz.

CYNTHIA GREY SAYS.
Some of the Philadelphia ministers are shaking their heads because the Y. W. C. A. there has found that good looks and social charm are the things most coveted by girls.
The Y. W. C. A. conducts a night school for girls. It offered courses in cooking and home making, in physical culture, in sewing, in psychology, in dressmaking and millinery.
The beauty culture and etiquette classes were crowded night after night while in the others only a handful of girls enrolled. More than 500 attended the beauty talks.

Does this indicate a flippant tendency in modern girlhood? Does it mean that the modern girl cares nothing for the so-called "worth-while" things that a woman should know? Does it mean that girls care nothing about becoming good housekeepers?

It may be that the modern girl is more flippant than her mother and grandmother, and yet I see no alarming tendency in the experiment at Philadelphia.

Years ago the only girls who paid any attention to beauty culture as it is practiced today were the wealthy. The great mass of women drudged it, if they had any, soon waned. In fact, there was many a man who preferred that his wife be known as a good cook, instead of a beautiful, attractive woman.

Those things have changed and the feminine in woman has come to the front. The Philadelphia girls want to marry, and they know that today very few husbands are won because a girl is a good cook, or can make her own clothes.

It is beauty and charm that attracts the man, and it is a perfectly normal and healthy sign that girls should want to attain these.

Just because a girl tries to be beautiful is no sign that she will not make a good wife, although that undoubtedly was the opinion held by many in preceding generations and some people today.

Today, I believe, the majority of men are prouder if their wife is beautiful and attractive than if she keeps the house spotlessly clean and can make the best cherry pie in Kalama-soo.

And the chances are that if you keep your husband proud of you, there won't be any lost love. The woman is wise who seeks to preserve and improve her beauty both before and after marriage.

Menus for a Family

Breakfast—Chilled cantaloupe, eggs poached in milk on graham toast, toasted bran muffins, marmalade, milk, coffee.
Luncheon—Baked farina with cheese, lettuce sandwiches, fruit cup, drop cookies, milk, tea.
Dinner—Veal birds, creamed potatoes, buttered peas, head lettuce with Roquefort cheese dressing, raspberry dumplings, whole wheat bread, milk, coffee.

A bit of crisp broiled beef can be served to a child of four years if the vegetables, fruit, bread and milk are not satisfying for the evening meal.
Since cantaloupes are a mild fruit the marmalade is suggested in the breakfast menu to add piquancy to the meal.

Baked Farina With Cheese.
Two cups milk, 1/2 cup farina, 1/2 teaspoon salt, 1 egg, 1 cup grated cheese, butter.

Heat milk in top of double boiler. Add salt and bring to the boiling point. Stir in farina, beating with a fork. Cook directly over the fire, stirring constantly for 10 minutes. Cook over boiling water for 30 minutes. Remove from heat and beat in egg. Spread in a shallow pan to cool. Cut in small squares and line a well-buttered baking dish with squares. Sprinkle with cheese and dot with bits of butter. Continue layer for layer until all is used. The last layer should be of cheese. Bake in a hot oven until cheese is melted and top is browned, about 20 minutes. Serve from baking dish.

HOUSEHOLD SUGGESTIONS.
Keep a Record.
As you put away your canned food keep a record of the material and the cost. This helps in planning for the next season.

Nicks and Chips.
Have a bit of rubber tubing put on the nozzles of the sink faucets if you wish to avoid breakage and the nicks and chips that are even worse.

Prevents Tarnish.
A coat of lacquer applied to your brass candlesticks and fixtures will keep them from tarnishing.

FASHION HINTS.
Sophisticated Simplicity.
The cocard of pleated ribbon or the jeweled pin is a favorite trimming for the bangkok hat.

This is Unusual.

Plasterers' Strike Ties Up $500,000,000 Building

Washington, July 8.—(AP)—With its continuance threatening to block $500,000,000 in construction in various cities, the strike in the plastering industry has reached a virtual deadlock as a result of the failure of an arbitration proposal submitted by building contractors.

Reluctating its stand in the recent conference called by Secretary Davis in an effort to settle the dispute, the Brick Layers, Masons and Plasterers International Union of America, has refused to accept arbitration of its differences with the Operative Plasterers' International Union on a status quo basis.

WHEN IS AN ULTIMATE MAJORITY?

Discussing and opposing the proposal of Vice President Dawes for a change of United States senate rules so that important measures may be brought to vote, former Senator Beveridge of Indiana says that ultimate majorities, not temporary majorities, must govern.

When is a majority ultimate and when is it temporary and who is to decide? Is it an ultimate majority when it has changed from a minority, or when it has changed back again?

Senator Beveridge's argument has much to commend it. He said:

"The American senate was established to prevent hasty action. Its purpose was to check unworthy or questionable projects. It was designed to be the refuge of the minority. The senate of the United States was meant to be the deliberative body in the legislative department of our government—not merely a voting machine to register the fancies of a temporary majority, not merely a debating chamber, but a deliberative council.

"The principal function of the senate is deliberation. It was to perform that function that the senate was created."

Thus far his interpretations of history and his conclusions are accepted. It is not understood that the Dawes proposal is intended to end the career of the senate as a deliberative body. If the purpose of the vice president's reform is to end deliberation, to prevent free and full debate, the Indiana senator has the better of the argument probably. If the vice president's proposal is not to end deliberation, but to end deliberate obstruction, it has great merit. If it is possible to allow a debate to go on two or three weeks, it would seem that measures to bring a question to a vote after such hearing could not be held to be unreasonable. It is possible for a legislative body to be deliberative without enthroneing the individual so that he can make his personal demand on penalty that the whole measure will be talked to death if it is not granted. That is the issue raised by Vice President Dawes. So far as any of the senators or former senators have attempted to reply to his proposal, they have not met that issue.

The wisdom of the fathers is granted. With little business then before the senate the application of the rule then was far different from what it is now. Senator Beveridge's theories of government as propounded are not to be disputed. Never has it been an undebatable question as to the wisdom of the vice president's proposal. It may depend upon the wording of the rule that is to be substituted. It may depend upon ultimate interpretation of it. It may depend upon whether senatorial tradition shall preserve its rights to adequate deliberation. The fact remains that while the gentlemen on the other side of the issue have given the public some able discussions, they have not given full answer to the assertions of Dawes.

In incidentally, Senator Beveridge is so well grounded in fundamentals of the government that it is difficult to see in him the same man who was hitching his cart to the recall of judges and judicial decisions and delivering the funeral oration over the republican party not many years ago. He is welcomed back among those who do not believe in such stuff.

LICENSES FOR ROADHOUSES.

Hereafter roadhouses must obtain licenses from the county board of supervisors. The law governing them was sponsored by Senator Florence Fifer Bohrer of Bloomington, daughter of former Governor Fifer. Her position on this subject is one of progress rather than prohibition. Her purpose is not so much to interfere with the roadhouses as it is to give to motorists assurance that any public place they visit in the country is under supervision of the county board. Licenses may be revoked when certain standards are not met.

In the past there was no regulation and no supervision. If a place was being conducted in violation of law, it was subject to being raided by the sheriff. That officer had to do only with violations. It was possible for a place to have persons of immoral character without being placed in jeopardy if there were no law violations on the premises. As now understood the new law permits discretion by the county board in the matter of issuance of licenses.

It is up to the proprietors to maintain good reputations. There are as many respectable people on the highways looking for a pleasure resort as there are hoodlums. Up to this time they never could be sure of the places at which they were stopping.

Licenses can not always be a mark of guaranty, however. The boards of supervisors meet regularly in June and September. It is possible to grant a permit in June that may prove a mistake before September.

Like other laws of its kind, this is an experiment, and another legislature may be required to perfect it.

THE CLASSICS.

The old dispute about the place of Latin and Greek on school curricula has been revived lately, with a number of college professors pleading that the classics be given a larger place.

It all depends on what you want your school to do. If you want a school to do nothing except to train its pupils to be successful carpenters or engineers or architects or salesmen, then the classics are more or less out of place.

If you want a school to do nothing except to train its pupils who to live, how to enjoy life and work and play, then by all means restore the classics.

If you live in a part of the country where there are forests, this is the time of the year when you will want to go into them.

This means that you should also want to take care of them.

Don't leave rubbish about your camp or picnic grounds which you would not leave around a permanent home.

Don't pull up wild flowers by the roots, nor pick them to excess.

Don't pick rare ones at all.

And, above all, don't run risks of fire.

The forest is inflammable, it is not paved, and it has no city fire department.

Throwing matches and cigar butts around, city fashion, and leaving a fire to go out of itself, are dangerous in the forest.

Reserve your city habits. Be sure that your camp fire is really out. Quench it with water, and then cover it with earth.

Legitimate use is depleting our forests fast enough. Don't add the waste of fire.

WHERE SENATOR REED MAKES A MISTAKE

According to Senator Reed, the World Court would be either an international invertebrate or an international tyrant.

Which is the Supreme Court of the United States?

It has no power to enforce its decrees, and yet it is not invertebrate.

It has jurisdiction to invalidate the laws of sovereign states, and yet it is not a tyrant.

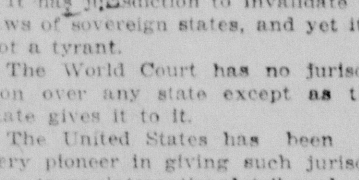

The World Court has no jurisdiction over any state except as that state gives it to it.

The United States has been the very pioneer in giving such jurisdiction to an international tribunal, and in accepting its decisions, even when they are unwelcome.

If you wish to argue that the permanent court of international justice is not so good a tribunal as the Hague panel court, to which we already belong, that argument, if anybody makes it, would be entitled to a hearing.

But if you argue against the World Court merely because it is an international tribunal, and you do not believe in such tribunals, that issue is "res adjudicata."

Senator Reed will understand that legal phrase. It means that the case has already been decided and is no longer open to discussion.

ADVENTURES OF THE TWINS

Olive Roberts Barton

NO. 10—THE MIRE OF MUD

"There are two passengers for you, Saladin," said the Saddler.

The next place the Twins came to on their way to Pixie Cave was the Mire of Mud.

"We'll get across it all right," said Nick to Nancy. "Our magic shoes don't mind a little bit of mud. Come along and walk right over."

But they had not gone three steps when down they sank in up to their knees.

"It was just waiting to see what would happen," said someone nearby, and looking up the Twins beheld a queer looking man all dressed in leather.

"When magic meets magic," said this queer looking person, "then comes the tug of war. I guess my magic is stronger than yours and it will take some tugging to get out of that mud." Then suddenly he whistled shrilly on his fingers.

There were sounds of galloping and in a moment a wooden horse appeared out of the woods and ran up to his master.

"There are two passengers for you, Saladin," said the Saddler, for that is who the queer person was. "They want to get over the Mire of Mud. I suppose they are trying to get to Pixie Cave. Are you?" he asked the Twins.

"Yes, we are," answered Nick. "We are looking for the golden beehive that the Pixies stole from the Fairy Queen. It's hidden in their secret cupboard."

"Have you the key?" asked the Saddler.

"Yes, here it is," said Nick, reaching down in his pocket and holding it up for the Saddler to see.

"I'm not quite sure that is the right one," said the Saddler. "I can't let my wooden horse carry you over the mire unless you have the right key to the secret cupboard. Let me see it."

So Nick threw the magic key out on the bank and the Saddler picked it up. Instantly the wooden horse took the key in his teeth and galloped back into the forest.

"Oh dear! What have you done, Nick?" cried Nancy.

"Never mind," cried the Saddler. "You did me and my horse a greater kindness than you know. That key is not only the key to the secret cupboard in Pixie Cave, but it also unlocks the great oak tree where the saddle is hidden—Saladin's saddle that was stolen from him years ago."

Again there were sounds of hoofs, and the wooden horse appeared again with the saddle which he held firmly in his teeth.

The Saddler took the saddle and buckled it onto the horse's back.

Instantly the wooden horse turned into a beautiful white mare, the Saddler turned into a prince, and the Mire of Mud turned into a lovely garden.

"Here is your key, children," said the Saddler—I mean the Prince. "Now get on my white mare and she will take you as far as the Cucumber Patch of the Pickle Woman. I have no power beyond my own kingdom. But it is by your kindness that we have been saved and I hope you may get through the Cucumber Patch safely and reach Pixie Cave before night."

"Thank you, sir," said Nancy and Nick, riding away toward the north as fast as the white mare could carry them.

FABLES ON HEALTH

Ice cream is a good food for both children and grownups, providing it is properly made.

It contains butterfat and other solids of milk, including proteins and mineral matter, as well as sugar and flavor.

The fat and sugar contents insure a high caloric value. The butterfat renders it an excellent source of vitamin A.

Its milk proteins are builders of muscles and other tissues, and its minerals furnish material for bones and teeth.

Ice cream promotes health and growth among children. This has been proven by leading health authorities in different cities.

Underweight children show a marked improvement in growth and health when given a dish of ice cream each day for lunch.

When fed ice cream these children also became more alert and vigorous, and show decided improvement in their studies in school.

In one of the camps where discharged soldiers were quartered following the war ice cream was used as a part of the regular diet. Marked improvements in the health and physical condition of these young men were shown as a result of eating this ice cream.

Some people will not drink milk. For these ice cream is recommended, because ice cream contains much of the same food elements found in milk.

NEARLY INSANE AT TIMES

Mrs. Saunders Tells how Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Relieved Troubles of Change of Life

Knoxville, Tenn.—"I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound while going through the Change of Life. I was very nervous, could not sleep and had melancholy spells. In fact, I was nearly insane at times and my memory was almost a blank. I was so weak I could not do my housework half of the time and suffered dreadfully with my back. My doctor said I would have to worry it out and I went through this for three years before I began taking the Vegetable Compound which I saw advertised. I think it was eight bottles that I took. It has been two years since I took any and I haven't had a doctor since for that trouble. I do all my washing and ironing and I have gained from 116 to 138 pounds. I advise all women who suffer physically and mentally as I did to give the Vegetable Compound a fair trial. I hope it will do as much for them as it did for me."—Mrs. T. A. SAUNDERS, 711 E. Depot Street, Knoxville, Tennessee.

OBITUARY

(Contributed)
Harvey Elmer Spangler, son of Henry and Sarah Spangler, was born March 31, 1862, at Gettysburg, Pa. His death occurred at his late home two and one-half miles east of Nachusa, Ill., July 6, 1925, being aged 63 years, 3 months and 5 days.

Pernicious anemia was the cause of his death. Medical skill, faithful care and nursing that loving hands and thought could provide, his strong constitution and will to live, were of no avail. After a long and heroic struggle to regain his health his weary and disease-wasted body succumbed and his spirit returned to his maker and his God. It is ours, who hoped it might be otherwise, to bow in humble submission to the will of Him Who doeth all things well.

The deceased was one of eight children, and was reared, and received such education as was provided by the public schools in his native state. Having reached his majority, and being attracted by the fertile lands of this community, and friends already here, he came to this mid-west country in the spring of 1884, locating at Nachusa. Here he has since resided and lived his useful life—a life in which one could well wish there were many more.

On his arrival in his new home, he engaged in work on the farm as a hand for five and a half years or up to the time of his marriage. On December 11, 1889 he was united in marriage to Miss Olive Lois Emmert. To them were born two sons, George and Carl. Following his marriage he engaged in farming for himself on rented lands. He was a man of economy, industry, intelligent and close application to business, and made a splendid success of his chosen work. In due course of time, he purchased the site of his late home and, encouraged and aided by his faithful helpmate, improved and made it the splendid home that it now is. Appreciating the advantages of higher education he afforded his sons the privilege of attending institutions of higher learning, enabling them thus the better to fit themselves for life's duties and difficult tasks.

At an early age he confessed Christ and united with the Reformed Church of Gettysburg, Pa. When he came to this vicinity he transferred his membership to St. Paul's Lutheran church of Nachusa, where he has since faithfully and loyally worshiped and served his Lord, serving for a time as a member of the Church Council.

He was a member of the Grove City Camp No. 45 of the Modern Woodmen of America. In many respects the deceased was an unusual man. Again and again it is remarked, "Harvey was a fine man," and the writer heard him referred to as exceptional in his adherence to and practice of christian principles and conduct. Vulgarities and profanity, a common fault with men are with men, had no place in his vocabulary, neither found any favor with him. Cleanliness, integrity and honor were the law of his course and conduct. Not boast and bluster, but deeds characterized this splendid man. Those who had most to do with him, and therefore knew him best, bear emphatic testimony to his quiet, manly, conscientious life and worth. Not only the writer, but his associates, his acquaintances and his neighbors, say these noteworthy things about this plain, unassuming man. We say no more than what is fact, though he would not want it, if we say that a hero has fallen. Is he dead? No! Emphatically, no! Aside from his faith and his deeds, and blessed are the house and the community that have been the scene of such living and the heirs to such an heritage. Calmly, thoughtfully and confidently he saw the end of his earthly pilgrimage approaching. His Bible was his constant companion. Matters pertaining to the funeral service were planned in detail by himself, even to the text for the sermon. In it all you could see the man—the humble sincere christian.

He leaves to mourn his going hence, the widow, the two sons, and of sisters and brothers the following: Mrs. Laura C. Deardorf, of Arden, Pa.; Robert C. Ella May and George A. all of Gettysburg, Pa.; a brother and two sisters having preceded him in death. Besides these of near kin many other relatives, with a host of friends and his neighbors are left behind and will mourn their sorrow and their tears with those of the family. A loving, thoughtful husband, a kind indulgent father and a true friend has gone from among us who we mourn, to the Father, whom he trusted, for grace and consolation in this time of your bereavement and sorrow.

Funeral services were held at the home, Rev. D. P. Helzer of Nachusa had charge, assisted by Revs. Siler and Jones of Franklin Grove.

Jury Selection Slows Up in Opal Arthur Case

Tuscola, Ill., July 8—(AP)—Hopes of early completion of the jury panel to try Opal Arthur for the second time for the murder of Charles Martin of Monticello in December 1922, engendered by the acceptance of three the first afternoon, and one Tuesday forenoon, were not so bright at noon Wednesday.

When court recessed until 1:15 no additional jurors had been accepted, though it was believed that three of the second panel would be taken by both sides before the afternoon was over.

In refuting charges of a large defense fund, Attorney Grover Hoff of the defense said today that he would make a statement to the public at the start of the trial as to the exact financial condition of the defense.

Woman Killed by Auto Driven by Drunken Man

Sikeston, Mo., July 8—(AP)—Mrs. Leslie Welker, 30, of Fomelft, Mo., was instantly killed last night when she and three members of her family were struck by an automobile driven by Dick Greer, 35, a farmer living two miles from Sikeston, who is alleged to have been intoxicated and is still dazed in the Sikeston jail. Greer, has figured in three previous accidents.

Mrs. Welker, with her husband, small son and mother-in-law, Mrs. Sam Welker, all of whom were injured, were repairing a tire on their car on Kings Highway, four miles north of Sikeston, when Greer, driving without lights, suddenly crashed into the party.

"STOOL PIGEON" JAILED

Washington—Narcotic Agent Rackus gave Melvin Reed, a "stool pigeon," $100 to buy narcotics in the house of a suspect. Rackus waited for an hour outside the house, but Reed failed to appear. He was captured in New York and sentenced to a year in jail.

MOTORIZES SHIPS

New York—Within the next decade Columbus Circle will be more important in the night life of the city than the Times Square section is today.

Real estate values in the neighborhood of Columbus Circle have increased more rapidly in the past two years than in any other section of the town. Three new theaters will soon be built there, a Ziegfeld playhouse among them. At the present time Ziggle is playing one of his most popular comedies in a Columbus Circle theater. The newer and smarter night clubs are opening above the Roaring Forties while the theatrical district between Times Square and Thirty-fourth street seems out of the night picture, with cloak and suit houses threatening to crowd out the theaters any day.

The other day I recounted several little stories about J. Pierpont Morgan's antipathy toward newspaper photographers, yet his dislike of being photographed is not nearly as marked as was that of his father, Doc Skinner was assigned a number of years ago to get a photograph of the elder Morgan as he left his Glen Cove home to ride to work in his yacht. Skinner posed as a fisherman and paddled around the Morgan pier for several days. At last Morgan came down to the pier and Skinner bowed toward him. A gust of wind blew Morgan's hat into the water. "Hey, get my hat for me," the capitalist bellowed at the photographer. Skinner retrieved the hat and approached Morgan. "I'll give your hat to you only if you pose for your picture," Skinner said. The old man was rather proud of his hat and so agreed.

New York has known only one or two very slight tremors in the way of earthquakes, but the recent disaster on the Pacific coast where quakes are more common has brought about good business for the insurance firms here. The Woolworth building has been insured for $5,000,000 and the new Equitable building for $2,000,000 against earthquake damage. Manhattan is on an island of rock but an immense fissure is known to exist deep underground. Then, too, the earth is honeycombed with subway tunnels, great sewers and water lines. Speculating on the devastation that would be wrought by an earthquake here is Shawnee, Okla., Board of Commerce THAT the greatest force for the public good is the newspapers. THAT they are the leaders in the making of better business for the home city.

THAT if some merchants would take the trouble to find out the amount of money sent to mail-order houses from the home city, it would give them an awful jolt.

THAT it would wake them up to the fact that in order to compete with the mail-order houses, they should use the same methods as used by the mail order houses—ADVERTISING.

THAT the mail-order houses appreciate the importance of advertising. That is why they get so much business. THAT heavy appropriations for advertising are necessary in their business. THAT they make these appropriations; that is why they get rich at the expense of the local merchants.

IF LOCAL MERCHANTS PAID ALL THE ATTENTION TO LOCAL ADVERTISING AS THEY SHOULD, THE MAIL-ORDER HOUSES WOULDN'T DO MUCH BUSINESS.

"It had been hoped that the proceedings would end there, and that a vote of thanks and congratulation, moved by Professor Sergius, of Upsala University, would be duly seconded and carried, but it was soon evident that the course of events was not destined to flow so smoothly. Symptoms of opposition had been evident from time to time during the evening, and now Dr. James Illingworth, of Edinburgh, rose in the center of the hall. Dr. Illingworth asked whether an amendment should not be taken before a resolution.

"The Chairman: 'Yes, sir, if there must be an amendment.'

"Dr. Illingworth: 'Your Grace, there must be an amendment.'

"The Chairman: 'Then let us take it at once.'

"Professor Summerlee (springing to his feet): 'Might I explain, your Grace, that this man is my personal enemy ever since our controversy in the Quarterly Journal of Science as to the true nature of Bathybuz?'

"The Chairman: 'I fear I cannot go into personal matters. Proceed.'

"Dr. Illingworth was imperfectly heard in part of his remarks on account of the strenuous opposition of the friends of the explorers.

Some attempts were also made to pull him down. Being a man of enormous physique, however, and possessed of a very powerful voice, he dominated the tumult and succeeded in finishing his speech. It was clear, from the moment of his rising, that he had a number of friends and sympathizers in the hall, though they formed a minority in the audience. The attitude of the greater part of the public might be described as one of attentive neutrality.

"Dr. Illingworth began his remarks by expressing his high appreciation of the scientific work both of Professor Challenger and of Professor Summerlee. He much regretted that any personal bias should have been read into his remarks, which were entirely dictated by his desire for scientific truth. His position, in fact, was substantially the same as that taken up by Professor Summerlee at the last meeting. At that last meeting Professor Challenger had made certain assertions which had been queried by his colleague. Now this colleague came forward himself with the same assertions and expected them to remain unquestioned. Was this reasonable?

"(Yes, 'No,' and prolonged interruption, during which Professor Challenger was heard from the Press box to ask leave from the chairman to put Dr. Illingworth into the street.) A year ago one man said certain things. Now four men said other and more startling ones. Was this to constitute a final proof where the matters in question were of the most revolutionary and incredible character? There had been recent examples of travelers arriving from the unknown with certain tales which had been too readily accepted. Was the London Zoological Institute to place itself in this position? He admitted that the members of the committee were men of character. But human nature was very complex. Even Professors might be misled by the desire for notoriety. Like moths, we all love best to flutter in the light. Heavy-gest shots liked to be in a position to cap the tales of their rivals, and journalists were not averse to sensational coups, even when imagination had to aid fact in the process. Each member of the committee had his own motive for making the most of his results. ('Shame! shame!') He had no desire to be offensive. ('You are! and interruption.) The corroboration of these wondrous tales was really of the most slender description. What did it amount to? Some photographs. Was it possible that in this age of ingenious manipulation photographs could be accepted as evidence? What more? We have a story of a flight and a descent by ropes which precluded the production of larger specimens. It was ingenious, but not convincing. It was understood that Lord John Roxton claimed to have the skull of a pterodactyl. He could only say that he would like to see that skull.

"Lord John Roxton: 'Is this fellow calling me a liar?' (Uproar.)

"The Chairman: 'Order! order. Dr. Illingworth, I must direct you to bring your remarks to a conclusion and to move your amendment.'

"Dr. Illingworth: 'Your Grace, I have more to say, but I bow to your ruling. I move, then, that, while Professor Summerlee be thanked for his interesting address, the whole matter shall be regarded as "non-proven," and shall be referred back to a larger, and possibly more reliable Committee of Investigation.'

"It is difficult to describe the confusion caused by this amendment. A large section of the audience expressed their indignation at such a slur upon the travelers by noisy shouts of dissent and cries of, 'Don't put it! Withdraw! Turn him out! On the other hand, the malcontents—and it cannot be denied that they were fairly numerous—cheered for the amendment, with cries of 'Order! Chair! and 'Fair play!'

A scuffle broke out in the back benches, and blows were freely exchanged among the medical students who crowded that part of the hall. It was only the moderating influence of the presence of large numbers of ladies which prevented an absolute riot. Suddenly, however, there was a pause, a hush, and then complete silence. Professor Challenger was on his feet. His appearance and manner are peculiarly arresting, and as he raised his hand for order the whole audience settled down expectantly to give him a hearing.

"It will be within the recollection of many present," said Professor Challenger, "that similar foolish and unmannerly scenes marked the last meeting at which I have been able to address them. On that occasion Professor Summerlee was the chief offender, and though he is now chastened and contrite, the matter could not be entirely forgotten. I have heard tonight similar, but even more of fensive sentiments from the person who has just sat down, and though it is a conscious effort of self-restraint to come down to that person's mental level, I will endeavor to do so, in order to allay any reasonable doubt which could possibly exist in the minds of anyone." (Laughter and interruption.)

"I need not remind this audience that, though Professor Summerlee, as the head of the Committee of Investigation, has been put up to speak tonight, still it is I who am the real prime mover in this business, and that it is mainly to me that any successful result must be ascribed. I have safely conducted these three gentlemen to the spot mentioned, and I have, as you have heard, convinced them of the accuracy of my previous account. We had hoped that we should find upon our return that no one was so dense as to dispute our joint conclusions. Warned, however, by my previous experience, I have not come without such proofs as may convince a reasonable man. As explained by Professor Summerlee, our cameras have been tampered with by the apemen when they ransacked our camp, and most of our negatives ruined." (Jeers, laughter, and 'Tell us another! from the back.) 'I have mentioned the apemen, and I cannot forbear from saying that some of the sounds which now meet my ears bring back most vividly my recollection of my experiences with those interesting creatures.' (Laughter.) 'In spite of the destruction of so many invaluable negatives, there still remain in our collection a certain number of corroborative photographs showing the conditions of life upon the plateau. Did they accuse them of having forged these photographs? (A voice, 'Yes,' and considerable interruption being put out of the hall.) 'The negatives were open to the inspection of experts. But what other evidence had they? Under the conditions of their escape it was naturally impossible to bring a large amount of baggage, but they had rescued Professor Summerlee's collections of butterflies and beetles, containing many new species. Was this not evidence?' (Several voices, 'No!') 'Who said no?'

"Dr. Illingworth (rising): 'Our point is that such a collection might have been made in other places than a prehistoric plateau.' (Applause.)

"Professor Challenger: 'No doubt, sir, we have to bow to your scientific authority, although I must admit that the name is unfamiliar. Passing, then, both the photographs and the entomological collection, I come to the varied and accurate information which we bring with us upon points which have never before been elucidated. For example, upon the domestic habits of the pterodactyl—'

(A voice: 'Hush! and uproar.) '—I say, that upon the domestic habits of the pterodactyl we can throw a flood of light. I can exhibit to you from my portfolio a picture of that creature taken from life which would convince you.'

"Dr. Illingworth: 'No picture could convince us of anything.'

"Professor Challenger: 'You would require to see the thing itself.'

"Dr. Illingworth: 'Undoubtedly.' Professor Challenger: 'And you would accept that?'

"Dr. Illingworth (laughing): 'Beyond a doubt.'

OUTSIDER UPSET
DOPE IN SWEEP-
STAKES WEDNESDAYDefeated Favorite for Race
at Cleveland; Jockey
Suspended

Cleveland, Ohio, July 9.—(AP)—Under a masterful drive by Marvin Childs, Omaha, Worthy Harvester, an outsider in the betting Wednesday defeated Gordon Dillon, odds-on favorite in the Fasig Sweepstakes, first race for 3 year old trotters in the Grand Circuit this season.

Childs kept his gelding off the fast pace, and took the first and third heats, the second going to Gordon Dillon, which led all the way. The favorite tired in the other heats. After making a break in the first heat and trailing far out of it for a quarter of a mile, driver W. S. Garrison sent him to the front, and Gordon Dillon trotted the last half in 1:02 3/5, finishing third only heads behind Worthy Harvester and Lucille Wright.

Tennis, driven by Tom Berry, Flemington, N. J., furnished another upset when he defeated Dr. Strongworthy, odds-on favorite in the 2:12 trot in straight heats.

Tennis An Upset Too.

The junior drivers' race, the second of the feature, developed into the prettiest racing of the North Randall meeting. The boys, relatives of Grand Circuit drivers, kept their horses well bunched, the event going to Czarna Gale, driven by Eugene Edman, son of Fred Edman, after three heats.

Norman Gratton and Lily the Great made it a double win for the meeting by winning the 2:12 pace and 2:10 pace, respectively. It was the first start of Norman Gratton for James Gleason, Williamsport, Pa., who purchased him this week at a price reported at approximately $10,000.

Announcement was made that W. T. Crozier, Hartford, Conn., had been suspended for the remainder of the meeting for an unsatisfactory drive Saturday.

COVELESKIE NOW
LEADS LEAGUE IN
NO. OF GAMES WON

Cleveland Castoff is Pitching Great Ball for Washington

New York, July 9.—(AP)—The veteran spit baller, Stanley Coveleskie, a Cleveland cast-off, traded to Washington late last season, today is the leading twirler in the American League with 11 victories out of 12 starts. This speaker probably regrets now that he thought Covey's days were over.

Coveleskie marked up his latest triumph for the world champions yesterday, by a 10-2 victory over the White Sox, which gives the Senators a grip at the head of the American League by two and one half games.

The Athletics broke even with Cleveland. The Indians took the first game, 14-3, pounding four Philadelphia pitchers for 19 hits. In the second encounter, Eddie Rommel checked the Cleveland batting spree, and the Mackmen won, 7-5.

Detroit hung up a double victory over the Red Sox, 5-0 and 8-2. In the first shutout, the Tigers have enjoyed this year. Daus allowed Boston but six hits. Heinemann, Bengal outfielder, hit a home run in each game.

Yanks Finally Win.

The Yankees' losing streak, which had stretched to four games, stopped with victory over the Browns in a loose game. Babe Ruth's seventh home run of the year, with one on base in the third inning, helped the Hugmen to a 6-4 victory. Each club used three pitchers.

Rain caused a lull on the National League front, the two combats between the Pirates and the Giants going over today. One game still separates the McGraw club from the peak.

The Cardinals came out on the long end of a 5-4 score with the Braves in the only National League contest played, showers forcing the other clubs to remain idle. Mails held Boston scoreless until the ninth when pinch hitters helped stage a rally.

Foster H. Edwards, recruit from Dartmouth College, has been released by the Braves to Worcester Eastern League club.

Collegiate Fashions And Fads

Some dour cynic has observed that a man comes out of college no smarter than he went in. He comes out better educated, the cynic meant, but the amount of the gray matter with which he was endowed at birth is precisely the same upon entrance as upon exit. It seems to be the present-day fashion to poke fun at higher education. Yet, as concerns good manners and correct appearance, which is their offshoot, John Locke, the English philosopher, struck the keynote when he wrote, "Education begins the gentleman." The Fine Art of Dress is deeply indebted to the university man for contributing many youthful and colorful effects which have left a lasting imprint upon fashion. Without collegiate ideas to spice up and spruce up our clothes, they would be, indeed, a dull thing. We would all be dressing like old men, as in the days when fashions were sharply divided into men's styles and young men's styles.

This does not mean that "Kollege-Kut" suits and many other exaggerations and eccentricities, are to be accepted as correct to wear. In point of fact, such distortions of true fashions are falsely imputed to the university man. He is not that sort of a chap. He does not wear his hat flipped impudently upon the side of his head, like the Piccadilly toff or the cockney costermonger. He does not look as though he were about to make an ascension in balloon trousers. He does not affect cravats that knock your eye out and burst your ear-drums.

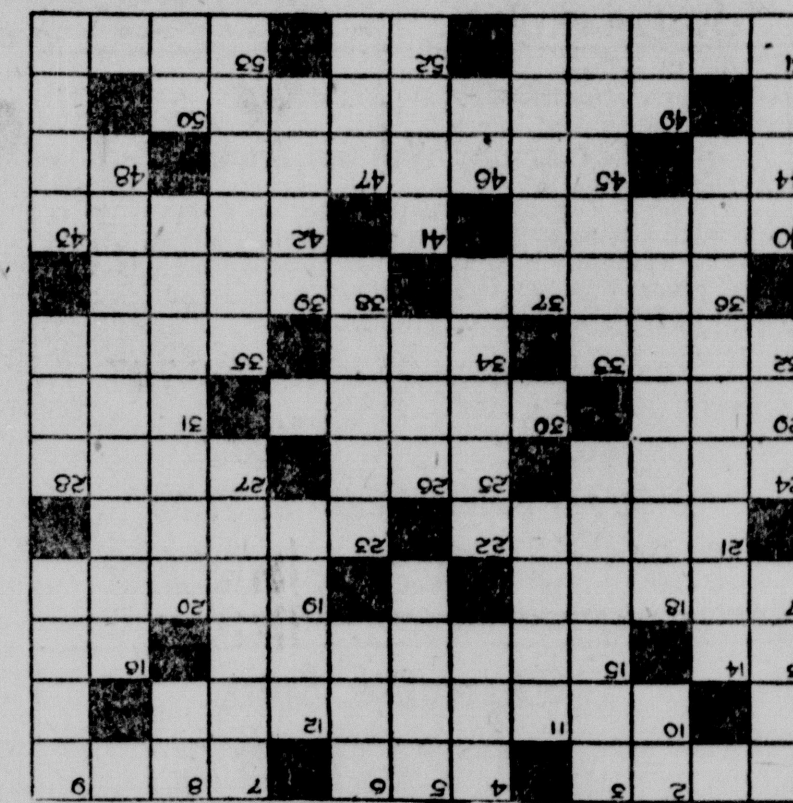

The university man is, first of all, a gentleman. He wears the clothes of a gentleman and wears them as the gentleman does the world wide. Naturally, he favors sprightly colors and jaunty styles, because these are the expression of youth, sunshine and high hopes. But—he doesn't go to the preposterous extremes wrongly attributed to him as the personification of the rah! rah! boy of the unfunny funny papers.

A fashion in no sense new, but still to be met among some collegians and the legions who take their cue in dress from the university man, is the combination of navy-blue patch-pocket coat, with or without waistcoat, and light-colored trousers, frequently of flannel. Such a turnout is portrayed in the accompanying sketch. Some stylists pronounce this effect as having declined in vogue, but, somehow or other, it declines to decline. Youngsters like it. It is different. It avoids monotony. It is refreshingly summery. It is ridiculous, though, upon one along in years and having a lineless waistline.

The RED RAIN MYSTERY

BEGIN HERE TODAY

SAMUEL HONEYBUN, retired English countryman, starts the neighborhood with the announcement that blood is found in his rain gauge. Right on the heels of the announcement comes news of the murder of—

SIR FRANCIS LATHROP, father of Margaret Lathrop, who is engaged to Sir Guy Lathrop. Sir Guy is suspected of the murder, but—

ADRIAN KLYNE, a private detective employed by Margaret, works on the theory that Honeybun's rain gauge has some connection with the murder.

SIR GUY leaves in a huff when Margaret refuses to marry but returns in time to protect Margaret from a strange man forcing his way into her sleeping chamber.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

GET TOO dark to see. You will be wondering why I came back after our tiff last evening. Well, so far as I was concerned it wasn't a real tiff. I wanted to lay a false trail for Inspector Roake who is burning to arrest me. I gave him the slip in London this evening, and here I am, under my own roof, which is the last place in England where he will look for me.

"I have been wretched all day, but now I am so happy," Margaret sealed the peace compact.

"Well, I cannot resume my habit of being openly on the old lines," said Guy. "Friend Roake would soon get wind of it through the local police, and I want to lie doggo till Klyne has won the trick. I have the utmost confidence in that young man. He conceded my innocence from the first."

"But how do you propose to live in a house full of chattering servants and keep your presence secret?" Margaret asked.

"I can only do it with your connivance and help," replied Guy. "If you are willing to accord them I shall occupy the hidden chamber in the east wing, in the family archives called 'The Priest's Hole.' I should have to rely on you, dearest, to feed me and let me out for an exercise stroll in the park after dark."

"Of course I will do it," rejoined Margaret. "I owe you a lot more than that for being such a pig last night."

"If you talk such rot I will give myself up to Roake," said Guy. "But as you have more sense I will go down the ladder and replace it where the midnight marauder took it from. In the meanwhile you can slip on a dressing gown or something and go down and let me in through the study window. Then hey for my hidey-hole and the ministrations of my beloved gaudier."

The program was carried out, and a little later the lovers passed through a balize-covered door giving access to the east wing. This was the oldest portion of the Grange, disused and to a great extent unfurnished. Guy came to a step in front of a carved oak panel representing grapes. With a touch on the center bunch he sent the panel revolving inwards, revealing a dark interior which he proceeded to illuminate with a pocket torch.

"Not much comfort and no day-light," commented Margaret, noting the wooden bunk, two medieval chairs of great hardness and a table. "You'll need candles, bed-clothes and toilet ware."

"No time like the present," said

Guy. "We will go and fetch the things now, while everyone is asleep."

They did so, and when Margaret had thoroughly mastered the manipulation of the movable panel, Guy stepped into what he called his bunk hole.

"Don't forget the grub," he said and began to shut himself in.

"One moment," Margaret stayed him. "Does anyone else in the house know of this place? Aunt Priscilla or any of the servants?"

"Not a soul," Guy made answer.

"It is a secret passed on from one head of the family to the next while the latter is still the heir. It went sorely against the grain with your father, but he played up like a sportsman and initiated me two years ago."

"How like him!" sighed Margaret.

And she proceeded to narrate her terrifying experiences with the dog, and with the midnight visitant at her bedroom window. But, except to say that he had gone up to London, she did not mention Sir Guy or his unexpected return in the nick of time to defend her. That would have entailed disclosing the secret of the priest's hole, and she did not feel justified in doing so till she had obtained her lover's permission.

Klyne pondered a long time. "Well," he said at last, "you had better be armed in future."

And he smuggled into her grasp a small automatic pistol, noting that the postmistress, who was also a grocer, was busy slicing bacon for a customer.

"Are you really writing a telegram, or is it only camouflage," he asked.

"Camouflage. I saw you at the door of the inn and hoped you would see me and follow me here."

Klyne went on to describe his call at the Rectory and Adela's treacherous letter introducing him to Mr. Wilfred Symes.

So absorbed were they in the interchange that they had shown no sign of having noticed that the third partition had been occupied for the last few minutes and that the occupant, who now stole quietly out of the postoffice, was the young lady under discussion. Once outside, Miss Adela Larkin strode briskly away, her ripe lips twitching in a humorous smile—an addily humorous smile, to speak by the book.

"Him a detective and never twigged me," she muttered over and over again till she passed through the Rectory portals.

And then the horrid thought: "Had the male party to that overheard conversation manufactured it with intent to mystify the eavesdropper in the next compartment?"

And she stood at the elbow, separated only by a pane of ground glass?

In the meanwhile the gentleman who was causing Miss Larkin such searchings of heart was taking leave of his client in the village street.

"Thank you so much," said Klyne. "You have given me a valuable item of information on which I shall proceed to act. Goodbye for the present, Miss Lathrop."

He raised his clerical hat and muttered back to the inn.

"I shall have to draw on my wardrobe for a change of garments," he muttered. "If Adela Larkin has spotted the Reverend Charles Danvers as Mr. Adrian Klyne the news may have been imparted. It is a pity that circumstances forbade my bringing a wider selection, but the check-clothed boulder will have to serve. And I think I'll be an American millionaire."

that she isn't a bad sort," said the landlord. "She doesn't have a rosy time with her old man, from all accounts. Lazy sweep, and as greedy for money as they make 'em."

Klyne nodded and stepped out into the road. Out of the tail of his eye he caught a glimpse of Margaret Lathrop entering the postoffice. He was not supposed to be known to her in his curate incarnation, but he very much wanted to communicate with her, as doubtless she did with him. The opportunity was too good to be lost. He also, visited the post-office and, going to the counter, bought some stamps.

During the transaction he saw that Margaret was in one of the partitions devoted to people who wait to write telegrams. He went over and occupied the next one, affecting to fill up a form.

"I am so glad you are back," whispered Margaret. "Did you make any discoveries in town?"

"I confirmed certain doubts which had been worrying me," replied Klyne vaguely. "I am not able to report anything conclusive yet. I found out that the man who tried to kill me is still in this neighborhood—never, in fact, left it for more than a few hours."

"I could have told you that," said Margaret.

And she proceeded to narrate her terrifying experiences with the dog, and with the midnight visitant at her bedroom window. But, except to say that he had gone up to London, she did not mention Sir Guy or his unexpected return in the nick of time to defend her. That would have entailed disclosing the secret of the priest's hole, and she did not feel justified in doing so till she had obtained her lover's permission.

"It had been hoped that the proceedings would end there, and that a vote of thanks and congratulation, moved by Professor Sergius, of Upsala University, would be duly seconded and carried, but it was soon evident that the course of events was not destined to flow so smoothly. Symptoms of opposition had been evident from time to time during the evening, and now Dr. James Illingworth, of Edinburgh, rose in the center of the hall. Dr. Illingworth asked whether an amendment should not be taken before a resolution.

"The Chairman: 'Yes, sir, if there must be an amendment.'

"Dr. Illingworth: 'Your Grace, there must be an amendment.'

"The Chairman: 'Then let us take it at once.'

"Professor Summerlee (springing to his feet): 'Might I explain, your Grace, that this man is my personal enemy ever since our controversy in the Quarterly Journal of Science as to the true nature of Bathyburs?'

"The Chairman: 'I fear I cannot go into personal matters. Proceed.'

"Dr. Illingworth was imperfectly heard in part of his remarks on account of the strenuous opposition of the friends of the explorers. Some attempts were also made to pull him down. Being a man of enormous physique, however, and possessed of a very powerful voice, he dominated the tumult and succeeded in finishing his speech. It was clear, from the moment of his rising, that he had a number of friends and sympathizers in the hall, though they formed a minority in the audience. The attitude of the greater part of the public might be described as one of attentive neutrality.

"Dr. Illingworth began his remarks by expressing his high appreciation of the scientific work both of Professor Challenger and of Professor Summerlee. He much regretted that any personal bias should have been read into his remarks, which were entirely dictated by his desire for scientific truth. His position, in fact, was substantially the same as that taken up by Professor Summerlee at the last meeting. At that last meeting Professor Challenger had made certain assertions which had been queried by his colleague. Now this colleague came forward himself with the same assertions and expected them to remain unquestioned. Was this reasonable? ('Yes,' 'No,' and prolonged interruption, during which Professor Challenger was heard from the Press box to ask Dr. Illingworth into the street.) A year ago one man said certain things. Now four men said other and more startling ones. Was this to constitute a final proof where the matters in question were of the most revolutionary and incredible character? There had been recent examples of travelers arriving from the unknown with certain tales which had been too readily accepted. Was the London Zoological Institute to place itself in this position? He admitted that the members of the committee were men of character. But human nature was very complex. Even professors might be misled by the desire for notoriety. Like moths, we all love best to flutter in the light. Heavy-gamers shied to be in a position to cap the tales of their rivals, and journalists were not averse to sensational coups, even when imagination had to aid fact in the process. Each member of the committee had his own motive for making the most of his results. ('Shame! shame!') He had no desire to be offensive. ('You are!') and interruption. The corroborations of these wondrous tales was really of the most slender description. What did it amount to? Some photographs. Was it possible that in this age of ingenious manipulation photographs could be accepted as evidence? What more? We have a story of a flight and a descent by ropes which precluded the production of larger specimens. It was ingenious, but not convincing. It was understood that Lord John Roxton claimed to have the skull of a pterodactyl. He could only say that he would like to see that skull.

"Lord John Roxton: 'Is this fellow calling me a liar?' (Uproar.)

"The Chairman: 'Order! order. Dr. Illingworth, I must direct you to bring your remarks to a conclusion and to move your amendment.'

"Dr. Illingworth: 'Your Grace, I have more to say, but I bow to your ruling. I move, then, that, while Professor Summerlee be thanked for his interesting address, the whole matter shall be regarded as "non proven," and shall be referred back to a larger and possibly more reliable Committee of Investigation.'

"It is difficult to describe the confusion caused by this amendment. A large section of the audience expressed their indignation at such a slur upon the travelers by noisy shouts of dissent and cries of, 'Don't put it! Withdraw!' 'Turn him out!' On the other hand, the malcontents—and it cannot be denied that they were fairly numerous—cheered for the amendment, with cries of 'Order!' 'Chair!' and 'Fair play!' A scuffle broke out in the back benches, and blows were freely exchanged among the medical students who crowded that part of the hall. It was only the moderating influence of the presence of large numbers of ladies which prevented an absolute riot. Suddenly, however, there was a pause, a hush, and then complete silence. Professor Challenger was on his feet. His appearance and manner were peculiarly arresting, and as he raised his hand for order the whole audience settled down expectantly to give him a hearing.

"It will be within the recollection of many present," said Professor Challenger, "that similar foolish and unmannerly scenes marked the last meeting at which I have been able to address them. On that occasion Professor Summerlee was the chief offender, and though he is now chastened and contrite, the matter could not be entirely forgotten. I have heard tonight similar, but even more of offensive sentiments from the person who has just sat down, and though it is a conscious effort of self-restraint to come down to that person's mental level, I will endeavor to do so, in order to allay any reasonable doubt which could possibly exist in the minds of anyone." (Laughter and interruption.) 'I need not remind this audience that, though Professor Summerlee, as the head of the Committee of Investigation, has been put up to speak tonight, still it is I who am the real prime mover in this business, and that it is mainly to me that any successful result must be ascribed. I have safely conducted these three gentlemen to the spot mentioned, and I have, as you have heard, convinced them of the accuracy of my previous account. We had hoped that we should find upon our return that no one was so dense as to dispute our joint conclusions. Warned, however, by my previous experience, I have not come without such proofs as may convince a reasonable man. As explained by Professor Summerlee, our cameras have been tampered with by the apemen when they ransacked our camp, and most of our negatives ruined. (Jeers, laughter, and 'Tell us another!' from the back.) 'I have mentioned the apemen, and I cannot forbear from saying that some of the sounds which now meet my ears bring back most vividly to my recollection my experiences with those interesting creatures.' (Laughter.) 'In spite of the destruction of so many invaluable negatives, there still remain in our collection a certain number of corroborative photographs showing the conditions of life upon the plateau. Did they accuse them of having forged these photographs? (A voice, 'Yes,' and considerable interruption which ended in several men being put out of the hall.) 'The negatives were open to the inspection of experts. But what other evidence had they? Under the conditions of their escape it was naturally impossible to bring a large amount of baggage, but they had rescued Professor Summerlee's collections of butterflies and beetles, containing many new species. Was this not evidence?' (Several voices, 'No.' 'Who said no?')

"Dr. Illingworth (rising): 'Our point is that such a collection might have been made in other places than a prehistoric plateau.' (Applause.)

"Professor Challenger: 'No doubt, sir, we have to bow to your scientific authority, although I must admit that the name is unfamiliar. Passing, then, both the photographs and the entomological collection, I come to the varied and accurate information which we bring with us upon points which have never before been elucidated. For example, upon the domestic habits of the pterodactyl—' (A voice: 'Bosh, and uproar.) '—I say, that upon the domestic habits of the pterodactyl we can throw a flood of light. I can exhibit to you from my portfolio a picture of that creature taken from life which would convince you—'

"Dr. Illingworth: 'No picture could convince us of anything.'

"Professor Challenger: 'You would require to see the thing itself.'

"Dr. Illingworth: 'Undoubtedly.'

"Professor Challenger: 'And you would accept that?'

"Dr. Illingworth (laughing): 'Beyond a doubt.'

OUTSIDER UPSET
DOPE IN SWEEP-
STAKES WEDNESDAYDefeated Favorite for Race
at Cleveland; Jockey
Suspended

Cleveland, Ohio, July 9.—(AP)—Under a masterful drive by Marvin Childs, Omaha, Worthy Harvester, an outsider in the betting Wednesday defeated Gordon Dillon, odds-on favorite in the Fasig Sweepstakes, first race for 3 year old trotters in the Grand Circuit this season.

Childs kept his gelding off the fast pace, and took the first and third heats, the second going to Gordon Dillon, which led all the way. The favorite tried in the other heats. After making a break in the first heat and trailing far out of it for a quarter of a mile, driver W. S. Garrison sent him to the front, and Gordon Dillon trotted the last half in 1:02 3/5, finishing third only heads behind Worthy Harvester and Lucille Wright.

Tennis, driven by Tom Berry, Flemington, N. J., furnished another upset when he defeated Dr. Strongworthy, odds-on favorite in the 212 trot in straight heats.

The junior drivers' race, the second feature, developed into the prettiest driving of the North Randall meeting. The boys, relatives of Grand Circuit drivers, kept their horses well bunched, the event going to Czarina Gale, driven by Eugene Edman, son of Fred Edman, after three heats.

Norman Gratton and Lily the Great made it a double win for the meeting by winning the 212 pace and 210 pace, respectively. It was the first start of Norman Gratton for James Glendon, Williamsport, Pa., who purchased him this week at a price reported at approximately $10,000.

Announcement was made that W. T. Crozier, Hartford, Conn., had been suspended for the remainder of the meeting for an unsatisfactory drive Saturday.

Sam Rice and "Goose" Goslin of the Senators crept closer to Johnny Mostil for the base stealing honors of the American League, when Rice pilfered three sacks and Goslin two. Mostil is in front with 26. Rice runner up with 17 and Goslin is trailing with 16.

The veteran George Dauss let the Red Sox down with six hits, while the Tigers touched Ehmke for ten. Cobb and Heilmann led the attack for Detroit, each poling three hits, one of Heilmann's being a homer and one of Cobb's a double.

Babe Ruth has polished off his home run bat and has hopes of getting up close to four base leaders.

"Duster" Mails pitched shutout ball against the Braves for eight innings, but eased up before the parade of pinch hitters sent in to the fray.

The presence of Manager Hornsby in uniform after being laid up with an injured leg inspired the Cardinals. Bell, especially, gave a fine exhibition of fielding.

Walter Johnson, veteran pitcher, has been having trouble with his tonsils. He was left in Washington but expects to join the Senators in a day or two.

COVELESKIE NOW
LEADS LEAGUE IN
NO. OF GAMES WONCleveland Castoff is Pitching Great Ball for Washington

New York, July 9.—(AP)—The veteran spit baller, Stanley Coveleskie, a Cleveland cast-off, traded to Washington late last season, today is the leading twirler in the American League with 11 victories out of 12 starts. Trip Speaker probably regrets now that he thought Covey's days were over.

Coveleskie marked up his latest triumph for the world champions yesterday, by a 10-2 victory over the White Sox, which gives the Senators a grip at the head of the American League by two and one half games.

The Athletics broke even with Cleveland. The Indians took the first game, 14-3, pounding four Philadelphia pitchers for 19 hits. In the second encounter, Eddie Rinnel checked the Cleveland batting spree, and the Mackmen won 7-5.

Detroit hung up a double victory over the Red Sox, 5-0 and 8-2. In the first shutout, the Tigers have enjoyed this year, Dauss allowed Boston to hit six hits, Heilmann, Bengal outfielder, hit a home run in each game.

Yanks Finally Win.
The Yankees' losing streak, which had stretched to four games, stopped with victory over the Browns in a loose game. Babe Ruth's seventh home run of the year, with one on base in the third inning, helped the Huguenots to a 4-1 victory. Each club used three pitchers.

Rain caused a lull on the National League front, the two combats between the Pirates and the Giants going over today. One game still separates the McGraw club from the peak.

The Cardinals came out on the long end of a 5-4 score with the Braves in the only National League contest played, showers forcing the other clubs to remain idle. Mails held Boston scoreless until the ninth when pinch hitters helped stage a rally.

Poster H. Edwards, recruit from Dartmouth College, has been released by the Braves to Worcester Eastern League club.

Dubuque, Iowa, July 8.—(AP)—"Iron Man" Joe McGinnity, manager of the Dubuque baseball team in 1923, when Dubuque won the Mississippi Valley baseball pennant, and manager of the "Ironmen" this year, resigned his place as manager today. His interests in the baseball club have been transferred to Johnny Armstrong, last year's pilot, captain of the club and part owner.

Collegiate Fashions And Fads

Some dour cynic has observed that a man comes out of college no smarter than he went in. He comes out better educated, the cynic meant, but the amount of the gray matter with which he was endowed at birth is precisely the same upon entrance as upon exit. It seems to be the present-day fashion to poke fun at higher education. Yet, as concerns good manners and correct appearance, which is their offshoot, John Locke, the English philosopher, struck the keynote when he wrote, "Education begins the gentleman." The Fine Art of Dress is deeply indebted to the university man for contributing many youthful and colorful effects which have left a lasting imprint upon fashion. Without collegiate ideas to spice up and spruce up our clothes, they would be, indeed, a dull thing. We would all be dressing like old men, as in the days when fashions were sharply divided into men's styles and young men's styles.

This does not mean that "Kollege-Kut" suits and many other exaggerations and eccentricities, are to be accepted as correct to wear. In point of fact, such distortions of true fashions are falsely imputed to the university man. He is not that sort of a chap. He does not wear his hat flipped impudently upon the side of his head, like the Piccadilly off or the cockney costermonger. He does not look as though he were about to make an ascension in balloon trousers. He does not affect cravats that knock your eye out and burst your ear-drums.

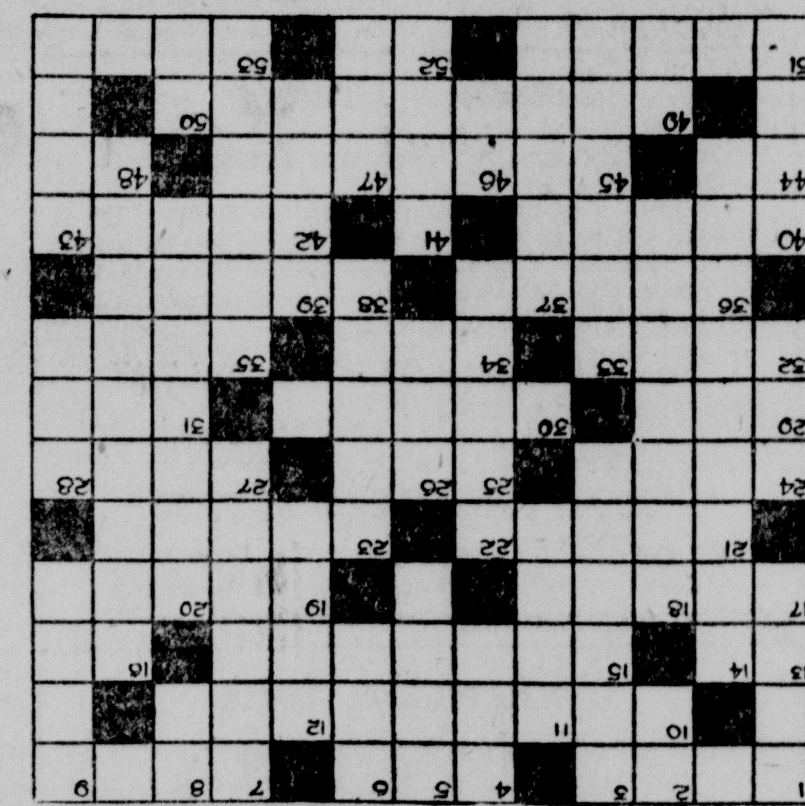

The university man is, first of all, a gentleman. He wears the clothes of a gentleman and wears them as the gentleman does the world wide. Naturally, he favors sprightly colors and jaunty styles, because these are the expression of youth, sunshine and high hopes. But—he doesn't go to the preposterous extremes wrongly attributed to him as the personification of the rah! rah! boy of the unfunny funny papers.

A fashion in no sense new, but still to be met among some collegians and the legions who take their cue in dress from the university man, is the combination of navy-blue patch-pocket coat, with or without waistcoat, and light-colored trousers, frequently of flannel. Such a turnout is portrayed in the accompanying sketch. Some stylists pronounce this effect as having declined in vogue, but, somehow or other, it declines to decline. Youngsters like it. It is different. It avoids monotony. It is refreshingly summery. It is ridiculous, though, upon one along in years and having a lineless waistline.

The RED RAIN MYSTERY

BEGIN HERE TODAY

SAMUEL HONEYBUN, retired English countryman, startled the neighborhood with the announcement that blood is found in his rain gauge. Right on the heels of the announcement comes news of the murder of—

SIR FRANCIS LATHROP, father of Margaret Lathrop, who is engaged to Sir Guy Lathrop. Sir Guy is suspected of the murder, but—

ADRIAN KLYNE, a private detective employed by Margaret, works on the theory that Honeybun's rain gauge has some connection with the murder of—

SIR GUY leaves in a huff when Margaret refuses to marry but returns in time to protect Margaret from a strange man forcing his way into her sleeping chamber.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

"Too dark to see. You will be wondering why I came back after our tiff last evening. Well, so far as I was concerned it wasn't a real tiff. I wanted to lay a false trail for Inspector Roake, who is burning to arrest me. I gave him the slip in London this evening, and here I am, under my own roof, which is the last place in England where he will look for me."

"I have been wretched all day, but now I am so happy," Margaret sealed the peace compact.

"Well, I cannot resume my habitation here openly on the old lines," said Guy. "Friend Roake would soon get wind of it through the local police, and I want to lie doggo till Klyne has won the trick. I have the utmost confidence in that young man. He conceded my innocence from the first."

"But how do you propose to live in a house full of chattering servants and keep your presence secret?" Margaret asked.

"I can only do it with your connivance and help," replied Guy. "If you are willing to accord them I shall occupy the hidden chamber in the east wing, in the family archives called 'The Priest's Hole.' I should have to rely on you, dearest, to feed me and let me out for an exercise stroll in the park after dark."

"Of course I will do it," rejoined Margaret. "I owe you a lot more than that for being such a pig last night."

"If you talk such rot I will give myself up to Roake," said Guy. "But as you have more sense I will go down the ladder and replace it where the midnight marauder took it from."

In the meanwhile you can slip on a dressing-gown or something and go down and let me in through the study window. Then hey! for my hidey-hole and the ministrations of my beloved gaoler."

The program was carried out and a little later the lovers passed through a balize-covered door giving access to the east wing. This was the oldest portion of the Grange, disused and to a great extent unfurnished. Guy came to a stop in front of a carved oak panel representing grapes. With a touch on the center knob he sent the panel revolving inwards, revealing a dark interior which he proceeded to illuminate with a pocket torch.

"Not much comfort and no day light," commented Margaret, noting the wooden bunk, two medieval chairs of great hardness and a table.

"You'll need candles, bed-clothes and toilet ware."

"No time like the present," said that the isn't a bad sort," said the landlord. "She doesn't have a rosy time with her old man, from all accounts. Lazy sweep, and as greedy for money as they make 'em."

Klyne nodded and stepped out into the road. Out of the tail of his eye he caught a glimpse of Margaret Lathrop entering the postoffice. He was not supposed to be known to her in his curate incarnation, but he very much wanted to communicate with her, as doubtless she did with him. The opportunity was too good to be lost. He also, visited the post-office and, going to the counter, bought some stamps.

During the transaction he saw that Margaret was in one of the partitions devoted to people who want to write telegrams. He went over and occupied the next one, affecting to fill up a form.

"I am so glad you are back," whispered Margaret. "Did you make any discoveries in town?"

"I confirmed certain doubts which had been worrying me," replied Klyne vaguely. "I am not able to report anything conclusive yet. I found out that the man who tried to kill me is still in this neighborhood—never, in fact, left it for more than a few hours."

"It could have told you that," said Margaret.

And she proceeded to narrate her terrifying experiences with the dog, and with the midnight visitant at her bedroom window. But, except to say that he had gone up to London, she did not mention Sir Guy or his unexpected return in the nick of time to defend her. That would have entailed disclosing the secret of the priest's hole, and she did not feel justified in doing so till she had obtained her lover's permission.

Klyne pondered a long time. "Well," he said at last, "you had better be armed in future."

And he smuggled into her grasp a small automatic pistol, noting that the postmistress, who was also a grocer, was busy slicing bacon for a customer.

"Are you really writing a telegram, or is it only camouflage," he asked.

"Camouflage. I saw you at the door of the inn and hoped you would see me and follow me here."

Klyne went on to describe his call at the Rectory and Adela's treacherous letter introducing him to Mr. Wilfred Symes.

So absorbed were they in the interchange that they had shown no sign of having noticed that the third partition had been occupied for the last few minutes and that the occupant, who now stole quietly out of the postoffice, was the young lady under discussion. Once outside, Miss Adela Larkin strode briskly away, her ripe lips twitching in a humorous smile—an acidly humorous smile, to speak by the book.

"Him a detective and never twiggid me," she muttered over and over again till she passed through the Rectory portals.

And then the horrid thought! "Had the male party to that overheard conversation manufactured it with intent to mystify the eavesdropper in the next compartment? Had he, after all, 'twiggid' her as she stood at his elbow, separated only by a pane of ground glass?"

In the meanwhile the gentleman who was causing Miss Larkin such searchings of heart was taking leave of his client in the village street.

"Thank you so much," said Klyne. "You have given me a valuable item of information on which I shall proceed to act. Goodbye for the present, Miss Lathrop."

He raised his clerical hat and sauntered back to the inn.

"I shall have to draw on my wardrobe for a change of garments," he muttered. "If Adela Larkin has spotted the Reverend Charles Danvers as Mr. Adrian Klyne the news may have been imparted. It is a pity that circumstances forbade my bringing a wider selection, but the check-booked boulder will have to serve. And I think I'll be an American millionaire."

Mr. and Mrs. Lester Hoyle and sons visited Sunday afternoon with Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Huff.

Little Helen Fredericks, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Fredericks, caught in the wringer of the power washer some time ago and had it badly smashed. It is getting along nicely now under the care of a physician.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Loevan and family spent the Fourth at the Frank Becker home. Little Ethel Loevan has since been quite ill and under the care of a physician but is improving.

Martin Gird who with his parents and brother Rufus moved some time ago to Harvey, Ill., has returned to Dixon and visited Sunday at the Frank Becker home.

THE FANGLE

LETTER FROM LESLIE PRESCOTT TO THE LITTLE MARQUE—CONTINUED

With my boy in my arms I began to think that nothing else mattered. What mattered if I saw the look of admiration in another man's eyes? What mattered if I felt the warm clasp of Syd's hand and knew he was particularly glad to see me?

What mattered if it even Jack alternately neglected or tried to pay me great attention?

There was nothing, nothing in all the world, except these two sons.

Almost under my breath I began to sing that exquisite poem of Carrie Jacobs Bond's. As children do, Jackie had adopted that song for his own and insisted upon hearing it always at "Sleepy" time.

I sat there crooning the song and thinking. I did not hear the door into the hall open but looked up as John came in from his bedroom.

Jackie stirred a little at the noise, opened his heavy eyes and murmured "Daddy" and snuggled a little closer.

A voice behind me murmured, "Jack, I wonder if you realize how fortunate you are."

I turned quickly. "Pardon me, Leslie, until I opened the door, I did not know you were in the nursery. I thought you were still dressing, and just wanted to look in and see the babies before I went downstairs."

With a smile I got to my feet. Jack tenderly took his son from my arms as I went forward to welcome our guest. Syd clasped both my hands in his and bent over and kissed them each.

"As I came in," he said, "I thought I was seeing that far-famed 'Madonna of the Snows.'"

I felt myself flame a rosy red but managed to say that it was a very pretty compliment which I was afraid I didn't deserve.

Jack interrupted me. "I'm sure, Leslie, that the boy has missed your lovely new gown."

"Not enough to be noticed," gallantly supplied Syd.

My husband came forward with a smile of admiration in his eyes. "Yes, old chap, I think I know how fortunate I am. No man better knows when he is lucky."

Then he turned to me. "You look like a snow maiden, dear. I'm afraid to kiss you for fear you will melt."

Eagerly I glanced up into his face. There was a tenderly quizzical smile upon his lips. No one knew better than Jack how quickly the "Snow Maiden" would melt to his caress.

Is Today Your Birth Anniversary?

THURSDAY, JULY 9
If so, you have many talents. And many keys to good fortune. But you must concentrate. If success is yours. Harness your energy. You have an over-supply. And curb your enthusiasms. You are original and daring. But lose heart easily. Others will help you. And you will have many friends. A happy marriage is indicated. You can excel in music. Or the fine arts. You can win fame. If you set out for it.

POSTER DRIVE OF DRY AGENTS IS THREATENED

Plan to Spend $50,000 in Campaign Meets Some Opposition

Washington, July 8—(AP)—Disapproval by high prohibition officials of the policy of building up sentiment for the dry laws by means of propaganda and speech making has seriously threatened the prohibition unit's $50,000 poster campaign. Reports have been prevalent in official circles for several weeks, that administration approval of plans to spend $50,000 on poster drive, and these have been revised with the announcement that the duties of Miss Georgia Hopley, woman prohibition agent, who has been speaking before women's organizations on the benefits of the prohibition had been abolished.

For more than a month artistically inclined employees of the prohibition department have been painting posters with catchy slogans appealing to women before Assistant Secretary Andrews of the treasury for several weeks, and while he has not stated whether he would approve the idea, he has indicated that he is not heavily in favor of it. He believes the money can be used more effectively in some other manner, but whether this could be done legally, officials are not prepared to say.

Texas has the first all-woman supreme court in the world.
